"This is it!" Mark shouted. "Just flip the switch already." growled Brandon. The two brothers have been working on this project for several years and now they would finally get to see the results. Mark hit the switch and the machine starts to hum with energy. The device starts to glow and the pair climbs in. The machine starts to shake and lift off the ground then all of a sudden, "BANG!" the engine went out. "Damn!" Shouts Brandon. "That's the seventeenth time it's failed today" Brandon says disappointingly. "We'll just try again" says Mark, "What do you think it was? the technium core? the thermal oscillator?"

"I don't know" Brandon said, "maybe we should just give up, after all the chances of us succeeding with time travel, if it's even possible, is minuscule." "Never" Mark said, "Just give it one more go." "Fine, one more go" Brandon said. they both jump in and programs the computer. The time machine starts to glow and shake then it blinks out.

"Yes!" Mark yells. They take a look outside but all they see is some sort of shifting black void as if their brains couldn't process the five dimensional space they were in and tried to make it three dimensional. All of a sudden they appear in the same place they started in but it looked a lot older and worn out. They climb out and look around. Everything is in ruins and there were no people. "What the-?" Brandon said. He gets cut off by the sound of a rocket taking off. They look up to see a futuristic space craft launch into the air. They then hear an announcement. "The last evacuation flight will commence. See more of Story Wars To the launch site." The pair look at each other and start to run. They arrive at the gates and see two people. "Welcome, you're some of the last to arrive." He escorts them to the rocket and a couple minutes later it launches up into the sky. "Whats going on?" Mark asks a nearby person. "You don't know? well the North Koreans fired their nukes and the U.S. retaliated and now the Earth is a nuclear waste zone and the governments decided to evacuate all citizens because Earth is now uninhabitable. Jeez what rock have you been living under?" All the two could do was stare back in shock open mouthed. "Hyperdrive sequence commencing in t minus thirty seconds." said a computerized voice. "Where are we going?" Brandon asked. "It looks like planet tn-48923, otherwise known as talon." responds a passerbyer. They hear the engine crank up and all of a sudden the star around them turn into beams of light as the ship goes into hyperspace. A couple hours later the ship slows down and they can see a planet in the distance. "Wow!" Exclaims Mark. The ship touches down on its surface and opens its gate. Brandon and Mark walk out onto the new planet and take a look around.
